

For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind.

Mr. Tanner

Mr. Tanner

Mr. Tanner was a cleaner from a town in the Midwest.

Of all the cleaning shops around,
he'd made his the best.

He also was a baritone who sang while hanging clothes.

He practiced scales while pressing tails and sang at local shows.

His friends and neighbors praised the voice that poured out from his throat.

They said that he should use his gift instead of cleaning coats.

But music was his life, it was not his livelihood.

And it made him feel so happy,
and it made him feel so good.

He sang from his heart and he sang from his soul.

He did not know how well he sang,
it just made him whole.

His friends kept working on him to try music out full time.

A big debut and rave reviews, a great career to climb.

Finally they got to him, he would take the fling.

A concert agent in New York agreed to have him sing.

There were plane tickets, phone calls,
money spent to rent the hall.

It took most of his savings but he gladly used them all.

But music was his life, it was not his livelihood.

And it made him feel so happy,
and it made him feel so good.

He sang from his heart and he sang from his soul.

He did not know how well he sang,
it just made him whole.

The evening came, he took the stage,
his face set in a smile.

In the half-filled hall the critics sat watching on the aisle.

The concert was a blur to him, spatters of applause.

He did not know how well he sang,
he only heard the flaws.

But the critics were concise, it only took four lines.
And no one could accuse them of being over kind.

Mr. Martin Tanner, a baritone of Dayton, Ohio, made his Town Hall debut last night.

He came well prepared, but unfortunately his presentation was not up to contemporary professional standards.

His voice lacks the range of tonal color necessary to make it consistently interesting.

Full time consideration of another endeavor might be in order.

He came home to Dayton and was questioned by his friends.

But he smiled and just said nothing and he never sang again.

Excepting very late at night when the shop was dark and closed.

He sang softly to himself as he sorted through the clothes.

But music was his life, it was not his livelihood.

And it made him feel so happy,
and it made him feel so good.

And he sang from his heart and he sang from his soul.

He did not know how well he sang,
it just made him whole.
